Quote of the Day

"Opportunity is missed by most people because it is dressed in overalls and looks like work."

--Thomas A. Edison (1847 - 1931)

Points to Ponder

In his book "The Next 100 Years", George Friedman, a prominent political scientist, projects the economic and geo-political issues of the world that can be anticipated over the remainder of this century. This long-term perspective is a welcome contrast to the media's "sound bite" mentality.

Introducing Family Legacy Preservation™

What significant events and life lessons have shaped your life? What are your guiding values and principles? What are your hopes and dreams for each of your children and grandchildren? We have found that when the only things children receive from their parents are money and other material assets, maybe the most important things are permanently lost.

In our collective experience of over fifty years as estate planning practitioners, we have recognized that clients want to pass more to their children and grandchildren than just cash and property. They want to preserve their legacy. For this reason, we at Dismuke, Waters & Sweet are pleased to announce an exciting new service for our clients: Family Legacy Preservation™.

Family Legacy Preservation™ is a process unique to our Firm. It is a five-step system strategically designed to capture each person's own personal story and preserve it for generations to come. The process includes an interview involving a series of thoughtful, open-ended questions that enable our clients to clarify the story, wisdom and advice they want to share with their family. The interview is recorded and later summarized into a narrative. The process culminates in a personalized, professional video preserving their unique values, ethics and story in a powerful way.

We know that through careful legal planning, financial assets can be protected and preserved long after one's passing. In addition to that important work, Family Legacy Preservation™ can preserve one's values, life lessons, memories, dreams for heirs and final wishes for generations to come.

We invite you to view the video located at the internet link below to learn more about how Family Legacy Preservation™ can ensure that the life you've spent years building will have lasting meaning to those you love most.
